Scottish Farmers Want American Cattle for Feeders, and Take Action-

The Possibilities of Texas as a Hog-Raising State-Cattle Prices Being Elevated by the Big Four.

The people of Scotland have been commaining for some time of the embargo laced by the government of Great Britsin on American cattle. The law as it now stands compels the slaughter within ten days after landing of all American cattle, which is in effect an absolute inhibition of the introduction of feeders or store cattle from the United States. The supply of cattle in Great Britain is far below the demand, and this embargo against American cattle is one of the reasons why beef is so dear all over the Scotch people, knowing kinggom. the be cause. to sching the cause removed, have action in the premises and are endeavoring to have the restriction removed so that they can import feeders from the United States and maure them for the market in Scotland.

A muss meeting of the people was held at Dundee recently for the purpose of seuring the needed relief—the modefication of the law so that American cattle could introduced without having to be slaughtered within ten days-and it was attended by farmers from all that section of Scotland. After the ford provost had orened the proceedings Mr. Andrew atcheson, in moving the first resolution, said that the importation of store cattle from Canada had proved so suc-Glasgow and Aberdeen that he hoped Dundee would get a share of traffic. It was difficult, however, to make the scheme pay unless they could manage to carry along with them the mportation of store cattle from the ad States as well as from Canada. hese cattle were forbidden because of the existence of pleuro in some of the fastern states. He did not think there was a sufficient reason for prohibiting these cattle from being sent to this counmy except under the condition of comsulsary slaughter on arrival. Pleuro was et like the cattle plague; it could be controlled. Moreover, many people were skeptical as to the prevalence pleuro, and he read a letter from Promior Williams of Edinburgh in which he rated that he had examined thousands of Totted States cattle, and in no Instance the discover any sign of pleuro-pneumenia contagion. These cases of supposed pleuro were merely cases of lung mease, brought on by exposure, and not of an infectuous nature. These tesmonies, Mr. Hutcheson added, ought to carry great weight and cause the goverument to look carefully into the queston. Canadlan cattle were a limited ommodity, but states cattle were pracically unlimited, and what they required was free trade in cattle with a reasonable amount of precaution against the streduction and spread of disease. Dundee was deeply interested in this quesion, because the removal of the restrictions on American cattle would give a great stimulus to the cattle companies

It was far from being a air trade that fut cattle could fought into this country and poured, as I were, into the beef market, while they were prevented from going to the like sarket to supply their legitimate wants the same way as other countries did. HOG CHOLERA.

Telas Free from It, While Other States

Lose Thousands of Animals. "Ever since THE GAZETTE, over a year ago, began the agitation of the hog raising question and made the statement that Texas bad an almost immunity from log cholera, I have been watching the papers both of this and other states in other to inform myself on the subject, "" aid a well-known stockman to a GAZETTE

oporter vesterday. What was the result of your observa-

The result has been to convince me that THE GAZETTE was right. While I have read of the ravages of hog cholera a Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, lows and many other states, I have talled to see an account of the disease in by section of Texas, the Indian Terriory or New Mexico. It must be in the limate that gives these sections almost thatlute freedom from this disease that other states has done so much to out fown the profits of the hog raiser.

'I saw a few months ago a statement Kansas City paper that a Kansas mer had started to market with a ich of forty fat hogs, but on the way lera struck them, and before the tarket was reached only six were alive. t is no wonder that there is no oney in hogs in Kansas and other states there cholern rages when they are sweet of in this style. There is another the favor of hog raising in Texas. Fall ples, on account of the mild winters bout as well as spring pigs-in fact, he claim that they do old is never intense enough to cause ath by freezing, for the rease the time cold weather begins the of the time cold weather begins the plane pretty well grown and can put hogs and will make both. Another good that has resulted is the establishment of pork packeries, which will furnish a good market for all the hogs that are raised in the state. The past has witnessed the sight of train loads of pork products coming into Texas from Chicago, Kansay City and St. Louis, but the future will witness just the reverse Texas can raise hogs enough to supply the entire United States with bacon, and can raise them at less expense than any other section of the country.

"The North has not only been supplying the Southern states with pork products, but has been shipping bacon, lard and live hogs to Mexico, when, in fact, Texas' should have been supplying that market years ago. The establishment of the packing houses here will give Texas the Mexican trade if decentraliroad rates can be secured, and I will make the prediction that in less than a year from the time the big packery starts up there will be a movement on foot to build another one and to enlarge the capacity of the one then in operation. The manufacture of ice in the South and the cooling room facilities has rendered bacon curing here just as simple and as easy as it would be in Alaska, and it is in the power of Texas to become the most extensive pork packing state in the Union.

THE ADVANCE IN PRICE.

Speculations as to the Causes that Brought it About.

Just before the meeting of the eattlemen's convention at Fort Worth last March, when the refrigerator prospects were being discussed. THE GAZETTE took occasion to call attention to a statement made by Mr. Armour before the Vests investigating committee, to the effects that the prices of beef cattle would envance to such an extent that the cattle business would be profitable to those gaged in it. THE GAZETTE also s nted that the dressed beef men and the Big Four were becoming alarmed at movement of the range cattlemen. were doing all they could to destroy th movement which tended to a discount of what had so long depressed the ch market. It was suggested that in o to keep down the refrigerator movement in Texas the Armours, Swift, Morris and others would so advance the price of beef cattle as to show cattlemen that there was no need for them, as a matter of self-protection to operate or encourage refrigerators in the range country.

What has followed? The convention met, and a determinetion was evidenced there to get at the bottom of the evil that had almost ruined the cattle business, and at once a movement was set on foot to start up three refrigerators in Texas. As the prospects for the success of the scheme became brighter the price of beef cattle began to advance, especially in the Chicago and Kansas City markets, where the Big Four hold out. Can it be that THE GA-ZETTE was right and that the combination has kept up the price of beef cattle for the purposes mentioned above?

It looks a little that way, but the Chicago combination may discover that it will be harder than they t ink to put the prices down again when they wish to do so Judge John O'Neill, a clear-headed and solid citizen of Lavaca, in conversation with a Houston Post reporter recently spoke of the general prosperity of the Southwest generally, and in the conversation stated that there had suddenly developed a splendid demand for cattle and that every man in his county who has anything above two years old could sell it at fair figures without trouble. This anomalous condition, after years of depression in the cattle industry, the judge was unable to explain, except on theory, "The principal buyer," said he, "is E. L. Suggs of Fort Worth, who has already secured 14,000, and ways he wants 100,000 head. What his object is, is not understood, but it is surmised by some people that Mr. Suggs is an emissary of the Big Four beef trust in Chicago, and Mr. Joe Whitworth, living a few miles is creating a market just now for the purpose of setting at rest the uneasiness of the cattlemen, which lately manifested itself in the Corpus Christi cattleexisting depression in the cattle industry in Western Texas so much cold water is thrown upon the scheme looking to the establishment of a refrigerator, and it is believed this idea is back of the entire movement."

A Valuable Lesson The past depression has done a fine lot of clearing up in all directions. Not only has it cleared out the speculator and the incompetent and unskilled breeder, but it has taught all breaders a valuable lesson. It has made them acquainted with the legitimate use of the knife in the herd, and whereas, a few years ago, all thoroughbred bulls were saved, now large per cent, are exported as steel There is more glory to a : inferior animal in a foreign tour if only one way, than in degrading his breed by a liflong service on the prairies.

Prices Will Gradually Advance The late break in the English cattle market, and its rapid recovery, is one of the strongest arguments vet developed to show that beef prices will continue to gradually advance. Under former conditions such a break would have demoralized markets on this side almost indeanitely. But Chicago prices dropped but a few cents and quickly rallied, thus proving the solid basis upon which present market conditions rest .- Chey enne Stock Journal.

DUNBAR, PA., June 19 .- The progress made last night by rescuing party has not been nearly so satisfactory as was hoped. The men are still working steadily, but there has been a great deal of fallen wreckage encountered. Inspector Keighler has decided to attempt an entrance through another lead. Men will be put to work and be kept steady at it in both chambers. It is thought the new heading may be more open. The men have been busy all night and are still on the Mahonig mine locating on the nearest heading toward the Hill mine chambers. The new attempt, it is thought, will be even more close to the buried men than the one they are now explosion occurred, and unless the men have some bits left in their buckets hunger is pressing them sadly if they are still alive. That they are still living has received an added hope from the fact that last night there was a sudden and unexplained increase in the ventilation through both the Mahoning and Ferguson mines. This can only be accounted for by the fall of slate on the Hill Farm mine by accident, or that the entombed miners have made a break through and are working toward the rescners from the inside. Of the have through gone who all phases of hope to despair, there is one whose steadfast faith has been more than encouraging even when affairs looked blackest.
